

Ms. Antolina García Carrascal obtained her BA from the Universidad del País Vasco (1990). She was awarded a Research Fellowship from the Spanish Ministry of Education (1992-1995). MA from the Universidad de Oviedo (1993). Visiting Researcher at the University of Oxford, Lady Margaret Hall (1994). Specialist Course at University College London, Department of Phonetics and Linguistics (2001).

Since 1995, lecturer in English Language. She has taught a varied number of subjects ranging from English Phonetics or Translation of Middle English and Renaissance Texts to General English Language courses and various Englishes for Specific Purposes. Since 1999, most of her lecturing and research duties and interests have been devoted to Maritime English.

She has been involved in life long learning schemes and qualifying courses offered at the University of Oviedo. She also collaborates with the Jovellanos Integral Maritime Safety Centre (Gijón) within their Maritime Specialization Courses.

Ms. García Carrascal has published in the fields of English Historical Linguistics and English for Specific Purposes. She is co-author of the text Materials for a Course in English Phonetics and Phonology (1999).

She is the Erasmus contact person for the bilateral agreement with Ege University (Izmir, Turkey) and ECTS coordinator of the Higher School of the Merchant Marine, University of Oviedo.